Hopkins in Ireland Norman White

Norman White, author of the award-winning and definitive life of Gerard Manley Hopkins, Hopkins: A Literary Biography (Oxford), has at last taken up in detail the final years of Hopkins's life that he didn't cover in depth in his biography. Hopkins spent five unhappy years in Ireland as Professor of Classics at University College Dublin before his death in 1889. During this time he wrote perhaps the most interesting group of all his poems. This is both a biography and a critical account of the poetry. White uses his unrivalled knowledge of Hopkins's work to examine the poet's personality and shows him as a sick and self-lacerating human being. This is not a conventional biography. The important things that happened to Hopkins in Ireland were mental, and so the book is an exploration of the poems written during this period largely as a form of psychological biography, working outwards from Hopkins's most intimate creations. Hopkins in Ireland greatly adds to our understanding of the personality and work of this great poet. ""This book will appeal to serious Hopkins scholars.""-Choice
