This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text. Purchasers can download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1901 Excerpt: ...at Magdeburg, as director of the theatre, he heard for the first time in his life a really good singer--Wilhelmina Schroder-Devrunt--and the impression was deep and lasting. She subsequently became one of his most intimate friends. At Magdeburg he gained a friendly footing, both with the artists and the public, and introduced many improvements in the management of the stage. He married, on November 24, 1836, Minna Planer, familiarly known as Wilhelmina. Early in his married life reverses overtook him, which were but the shadows of a dark future. Everything seemed to go against him. Few were friendly disposed toward him. It was painful to make both ends meet. He was beginning to learn that the giddy and fashionable throng which men call the world was not the place for the true artist. His greatest comfort, though, was the touching devotion of his wife, and, though in later years lack of mutual sympathy drove them asunder, Wagner, up to the time of her death, always spoke of her with affection. The union was unfortunate. Minna Wagner had not the power to understand her husband's genius--few people then had. "Lohengrin" was finished in 1848. His mental activity at this period was enormous. Up to this time his mind had wandered hither and thither over the widest range of subjects--religion, philosophy, history, legend, with no definite result. It was the study of "Siegfried" myth which brought him the conviction that at last he had discovered the secret of the new drama which he believed himself destined to create, that the theme of that drama must be the great elemental truths of human nature, the inmost heart of mankind--the folk--and not of the isolated individual. The spoken word, even when accompanied by appropriate action, can at best ...
