Any golfer interested in playing "America's top-100" courses likely knows most of them are private. It's also no secret that many of these courses host charity outings, thus providing a rare but real opportunity for anyone to tee it up on their hallowed grounds. Given these opportunities, we're pretty sure every top-100 thrill seeker has, at one time or another, thought: "Wouldn't it be great if there was a list of all the charity outings taking place at top-100 courses?" We know because we had the same thought. And after futilely searching for such a list, we decided to create it. It's the first of its kind, and it covers about 75% of the private courses in the top-100. Along the way, we discovered ways to play the remaining private courses in the top-100. Some have relationships with hotels that provide access to their guests. Some allow rounds to be auctioned off. And for those with less defined access, we identified "21 Secrets" that may prove successful at any private course in the world. Then we stepped back and realized what we created: the first-ever guide to playing every top- 100 golf course in America. Please note, this guide does not explain how to play America's top-100 golf courses for free. (If you find a guide like that, please send it our way.) In fact, playing top public/resort courses and top private golf courses as a non-member can be quite expensive. But with respect to the latter, the access - not the access fee - is often the bigger hurdle. The bottom line is, most private golf courses - even "fortress" clubs and those that have hosted golf's major tournaments - can be accessed in a variety of ways by non-members, and we happily present them to you in the pages that follow.
