You Can Catch More Flies With Honey: The Art Of Rhetoric, Persuasion, Manipulation, and Blarney

Carolyn Franklin

Physical aggression and bullying among women have increased noticeably in the past few years. I thought perhaps they were influenced by the pervasive, gratuitous violence in the media. And, in my opinion, that would be a contributing factor.

But, it's more than that. Women, historically, have not been pugilists; their weapon of choice is the "mouth" – they use words, volume, eyes and position of the mouth to convey anger or displeasure on any level. So why now are we using fists, hair pulling, kicking and head butts?

My conclusion, and opinion, is that women's lib is largely responsible. I am a feminist; to me, equality is a reasonable, feasible way of life. Let's all share equally in wages and tasks according to one's abilities.

But, "equality" has been interpreted to mean "same" – we women are the "same" as men. NO, we are not the same! Our physical function is considerably different from that of a man's. This is not wrong or right - it's different.

I am suggesting that this misunderstanding of that little word may be a deciding factor in why women are bullying more. We seem to understand that now, since we are "equal" we should be the "same" as the dominant sex in society – men. Totally erroneous.

This little book will explore a solution to today's increase in violence by women.
